

Text:

In the past, people did not have many opportunities to choose their future job. They usually continued their fathers and grandfathers' careers. Nowadays, there are a lot of choices and everyone has a dream of the future job that often appears in our ways of playing when we are children. One wants to be a doctor, other wants to be a soldier or a policeman, another wants to be a teacher and so on.

Camellia would like to have a job in which she can express herself and become successful. She wants to feel free and get a lot of money. She hates routine jobs. They are boring and they kill motivation. She wants to be a fashion designer. Why this job? Firstly, she likes it. She has been keen on it since she was a child. Secondly, she has always dreamt of limelight, fashion shows and beautiful models who can wear trendy clothes designed by her. Thirdly, she loves drawing and she is fond of all things related to art. Her father used to be a painter. Finally, she has a creative mind and she enjoys creating new styles of clothes. Fashion TV is her favourite channel.

Camellia is sure her life will be different if she becomes a designer. She will be well-known, and she will have a lot of money. Besides, this job may help her work in other countries. However, being a designer is not easy, but Camellia will try to do her best. She believes in herself.

Text:

Today, people in the world affirm that social works such as working for a charity, improving the neighbourhood and assisting other people must be a part of the school programme. That means students can participate in working for charitable organizations, which help the poor, the sick, the homeless, orphans and others.

Certainly, this kind of work may influence teenagers positively. Firstly, it educates them how to be responsible and disciplined and how to be patient while solving people's problems. Secondly, it can reduce stress and combat depression. Thirdly, it helps them develop their personal qualities when they serve those who are less fortunate. Fourthly, it teaches them many lessons like how to work with other people from other background and the value of hard work. It is true that the more you volunteer, the more benefits you will experience.

Students will have experiences at an early age about how they can improve their societies and other people's life.
